Pine Tree League

Norway 5; Oxford 1

Harry Delano and Jack McCarthy worked up a pitchers' duel in the game at the fair grounds, Saturday. There was plenty of action with Norway bunching hits that meant runs.

Oxford seemed unable to group their clouts except in the third, when one crossing was made. Manny Palmer was the only extra base getter for the day. Summary:

Mechanic Falls 6; South Paris 4

At South Paris, Saturday, the home outfit gave Mechanic Falls a scare in the second frame with four runs in a cluster. Turner, the hurler for the visitors, settled down after this demonstration and nothing more was gained.

Rowe was hit hard during the first three innings, but his luck returned and he held the Falls sluggers with a tight line. Game was called at the end of the seventh because of rain. The score:

Games Next Saturday

Norway at West Paris; Mechanic Falls at Oxford; Turner at South Paris.

Norway 3; Turner 0

A steady rain storm failed to submerge the teams at Turner, Wednesday afternoon. Wet field and greasy ball was no handicap for practically errorless work and low score.

Turner introduced Elsmore from Houlton and star hurler on Normal School team of Machias. He pitched excellent ball against the veteran Jack McCarthy, who is doing his part in keeping Norway on the top roost. Elsmore whiffed 14 and McCarthy captured 7.

Wedding

Stevens-Johnson

A very pretty and quiet wedding took place Saturday night, July 23, at the Methodist parsonage when Kenneth M. Stevens of Auburn and Elizabeth K. Johnson of Norway were joined together in Holy Matrimony.

The bride was dressed in pale blue silk. The single ring ceremony was used. Mr. Stevens is engaged in the painting business in Auburn, where he has a beautiful home. Mr. and Mrs. George Smith were the attendants.

Rev. John Singleton of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Norway, officiated.

DONALD B. PARTRIDGE ELECTED PRESIDENT

At the annual meeting of the State Clerk of Courts Association held at Rockland, Wednesday, Donald B. Partridge of Norway was elected president of the association.

Mr. Partridge is the youngest member among sixteen clerks and two deputy clerks representing the Supreme Courts in Maine. He served as secretary in 1920 and has been one of the most active members in the group. Mr. Partridge is in his ninth year as clerk of courts for Oxford County, located at South Paris.

The next annual meeting will be held at South Paris in 1928.

BLUEBERRIES DISAPPEAR ALL IN ONE NIGHT

Mrs. C. W. Chick is doing a rushing business in home cooking, not only in Norway, but has customers in Auburn and several adjoining towns, but her delicious blueberry pies are a thing of the past, as the well laden shelf of blueberries is empty and they all disappeared one night. She says if they will kindly return the cans, she will greatly appreciate it. She has a pretty good clew where they went.

DIVERGENCY OF FISHING REPORTS

Caught Not a Fish Nor a Fin

F. W. Sanborn, said to be editor of this paper, returned from Rangeley last Friday, says:

"Fished four days. Worked hard and got tired out each day. Not a fish taken. Somehow the much heralded famous speckled beauties infesting the Rangeley District have gone into the mud or some unknown cool place and wasn't interested in what I had to show them. I got discouraged and came home to rest up and enjoy a vacation in the printing office."

Caught Salmon and Trout

Irving O. Barrows, fisherman, and treasurer of the Paris Trust Co., So. Paris, says:

"Got home last night from Rangeley, and we had exceptionally good luck. Man at the camp next to us caught a five and an eight and three-quarters pound trout. Ralph Butts caught a seven pound salmon; and Mrs. Barrows caught a number of salmon weighing from two to three and one-half pounds. I don't know of any better place to go fishing than Rangeley in case you want to make sure of fish."

Radcliffe Chautauqua

Three days session of Radcliffe Chautauqua closed Tuesday night. The large tent located on Oxford County fair grounds and the active people connected with the outfit have departed.

There were excellent programs afternoons and eevnings of July 23, 25, 26, but the patronage was not great Good sized audiences greeted the talent on Monday and Tuesday evenings, but not the numbers the Twin Towns and vicinity might produce. Hot weather and showers proved a handicap for attendance and enthusiasm.

Neil Patterson's Scotch Highlanders and Guy M. Bingham were selected for a curtain raiser on Saturday. In the afternoon Mr. Bingham's lecture was "Choosing Your Vocation," at night he held the closest attention with the theme "The Blind Goddess." The Paterson Trio proved royal entertainers at both performances and comprise beside Mr. Paterson, Miss Helen C. Place and Miss Doris S. Kimball.

Neil Paterson has been in this country about 15 years and has been doing his Scotch specialty all that time. He had a long engagement last winter at St. Johns, New Brunswick, and has been west as far as California, with his trio. He is thinking of signing a contract with the Radcliffe Company for a long engagement down south and West for this winter.

Miss Helen C. Place has been in the United States about 17 years. She has sung in large church choirs in Providence, for the past six years. She has a natural, fresh, high soprano voice and during the past year has been under the instruction of one of the best Boston teachers on the voice, besides a special course at the New England Conservatory of Music. President Coolidge and wife heard her sing in Washington last year and gave her great praise.

Miss Doris S. Kimball started on the piano at the age of 7, and is a thorough musician. She has lately taken up the Scotch dances. She also has a light, pleasing voice.

On Monday, the Radcliffe Players staged "A Clean Sweep" and "The Wall Street Game" in the afternoon. In the evening the three-act drama "Give and Take" entertained an appreciative audience. Their work for the day won much praise.

Russell O. Berg presented food for thought in his two lectures entitled "Choosing Your Habits" and "The Silent Umpire."

Winston Wilkinson, violinist, Miss Emeline Maxwell, soprano, and Miss Marie Maloney, pianist, gave an artistic program Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Wirt Lowther, the grand old platform "war horse" presented clear cut ideas, dealing with good old fashioned methods and modern soft-hand treatment. He was very frank yet convincing in his discussions entitled "Choosing Your Ideals." "The Old Birch Rod" was his evening subject and he presented an exceptionally fine lecture, especially adapted to the fathers, and the mothers in the bringing up of their children without the use of the old Birch Rod. Among the points brought out was the ideals of the home, the law and order of the home, the teaching of principles, and the discipline of the child in the home. The speaker touched on the much discussed subject of the modern child and laid the blame where it belonged, not on the child, but in the home life of the fathers and the mothers. The other points touched on was the education and religious training, the dress of the present day and compared the different points with the days of the grandfathers and grandmothers in a very characteristic manner.

The Chautauqua parade must receive mention. The juvenile department, under Miss Carter, junior superintendent, made an impression on the streets of both towns almost before the big top was in place. Some fifty children in about as many kinds of fancy costumes were packed into auto trucks and with horns and vocal chords called attention to the coming show. Several decotated bicycles accompanied the cavalcade.

The Chautauqua tent was used Sunday evening for a union service which was held under special arrangement with Radcliffe management. Rev. G. Howard Newton of Norway Baptist church presided. Rev. John Singleton of Norway Methodist Episcopal church was in charge of the opening song service led by the choir of that church with Miss Daisy Chase at the piano. Scripture was read by Rev. Raymond Morgan of Norway Congregational church. The sermon was by Rev. L. S. Staples, pastor of Deering Memorial church, South Paris, on the theme, "The Unknown God." Seven pastors of the two towns had seats on the platform.

In spite of a deficit, Radcliffe Chautauqua is assured for 1928. A committee with Maford Mann, chairman, with Radcliffe representatives secured some eighty guarantors before the performance closed and on Wednesday the canvass netted twenty more, making one hundred on the contract. This was the number the committee required before any encouragement would be given for a continuation of Chautauqua in the two towns.

PLANS VISITING CANADA

John Woodman is figuring out a trip to Lancaster, N. H. His wife is assisting him. An overnight stop will be made with Mr. and Mrs A. L. Buck and if weather and roads permit, a move will be made on to Canada.

That section of the Province where John spent his childhood days. Will Channell's is the objective calling for a stay of a few hours. Sixteen or eighteen miles distant a newly discovered schoolmate will receive a door-yard call. This is the plan.

Philip Wight and Sid Atkinson finished carpenter work at Hunt's Corner and returned home, Wednesday.

State Highway Officer Injured

Eugene H. Stevens of Norway, one of the state highway officers of the motorcycle guards, at Portland, Sunday, was hurled from his machine and injured. He was removed to the Maine General Hospital at Portland, where numerous bruises and an injury to his spine were treated. He expected to return to his home in Norway the last of this week, for an enforced vacation.

Officer Stevens was preceeding Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh from Portland airport to the city, when he collided with an automobile which was backing out of a farm yard.

Col. Lindbergh took personal interest in Mr. Stevens, and sent candy, flowers, and a note of sympathy to the injured officer at the hospital.

Officer's Wife and Father Injured

Mrs. Lucia Stevens and Fred Stevens of Norway, wife and father of Patrolman Eugene Stevens, were patients and not hospital visitors as they planned for their trip to Portland, Tuesday afternoon. While on the way from Norway to the city and near West Falmouth, the Stevens sedan collided with another sedan driven by Miss Ellen Brooks of Portland.

Mrs. Stevens lost two teeth, received a badly cut lip and bruises on her nose. Her husband's father, Fred Stevens of Norway, suffered a slight fracture of the skull and a bad cut on his forehead. Her son, Cecil Stevens, 10, was uninjured. Three occupants of the Portland car received cuts and bruises, but not seriously injured.

Fred Stevens was treated at State St. Hospital and Mrs. Stevens was removed to the Maine General Hospital, where her husband was under treatment following the Sunday accident. Patrolman Stevens was astonished when he learned how the jinx was following his family.

The sedans were damaged and each driver blames the other for the collision.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stevens are at their home on Fair Street recovering from their accidents. Mrs. Stevens has lost a front tooth, nose and upper lip bruised and one eye blackened. She suffered a broken bone in her left foot. Eugene's spine is injured and a nervous shock is proving troublesome.

Fred Stevens remains at the State St. Hospital and reports Thursday morning indicate he is gaining rapidly.

COMMUNITY NURSE CHATS

During the afternoon of Saturday, July 30, and Monday, August 1st, conferences will be held at the Norway Nursing service room, 174 Main Street, for children who will start in school this fall. A letter has been sent to parents of such children, but as this list is incomplete, there will be mothers who will receive no letter and they are asked to regard this invitation as a notification of the plan and to be present with the child for weight and height.

The letter asks mothers to bring the boys and girls and Miss Davis will be on duty there from one to five o'clock, and she hopes there will be some at the very beginning of the period. Each child will be weighed without shoes, and the height taken. The parents will be told what is the normal weight for the height. In the hope of finding and correcting physical defects, if any exist, parents are asked to take the child to the family physician for a health examination. No child entering school should be handicapped with faulty vision, that can be corrected; by decayed, aching teeth, or by nose and throat conditions needing medical attention.

If the parents know the child is underweight, they can probably, before school begins, with extra rest, the use of milk, wide selection of food, and perhaps the correction of physical defects, increase the weight to normal. In doing so, they will be giving the child an equal chance with the child found to be in perfect health.

In this constructive work for health, the school asks co-operation of the parents of Norway to whom, indeed, keeping children well must be a matter of vital importance.

NORWAY WOMEN'S CLUB PROGRAM

The program committee for the Norway Women's Club met Monday evening at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Grace Brown, and a most interesting program was outlined for the coming year, which will mean much for the women of Norway.

Several fine speakers of note will be included, and it is the aim of the committee to have a variety that will interest all.

The Club has several projects in view to work for. It is the aim of the club to have a membership of one hundred and this can easily be done if the women will co-operate for something worth while. Meetings are held every two weeks, which means about two hours for each meeting. The first year is the hard year, but with every woman behind the movement, Norway will have a fine organization, and the second year will be easier and the third still easier.

DISCOVERED AUTOMOBILE PART

Robert Hayden, 6 year old son of Dr. Hayden, brought in a part of an automobile he picked up on Deering Street. He was accompanied by Lester Card, 10, of Water Street.

We suggested they better visit the garages and find an owner. This they did. Charles Bell claimed it.

The value of the part found is unknown.

Mrs. Edna Melanson and children and Mrs. Myrtle Hodgdon and family spent Tuesday with Mrs. Cinderella Hodgdon at Hebron.

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

Sporting Editor Got Pinched

Early in the afternoon, Saturday, when that portion of the crew who was not on a vacation, were busily engaged in getting out promised job work, Walter S. Chandler, the sporting editor, got his right hand badly pinched in the Miller Feeder. One of the "fingers" of the machine went through the flesh on the back of his right hand and out between the thumb and fourth finger. Chandler hastened to a physician and had the hand dressed and it is getting on well and he can push the pencil as usual.

E. C. Murch, with the assistance of Myron Roberts, proceeded to repair the "Feeder." One of the iron frames gave way and was welded together and the bent up parts straightened so by Monday morning it was in running order again. Had not the frame broken, Walter would probably have had a crushed hand instead of a pinched one.

R. L. Cummings, the Willys-Knight Whippet dealer, has an official opening at his sales room on Deering St., at an early date. We have printed a large order of dodgers calling attention to that event. Wilson Walker is in charge of the office during Mr. Cummings' absence but on that day there will be plenty of help to demonstrate the goods they carry.

Our friend, O. W. Brown, of the Boston Herald, was inspired to pen a touching tribute to the Lynn police force, when four members acted as pall bearers for "Brownie," the police dog. We published the story in this issue. Read it to your children. There are tender hearts on this swiftly moving planet despite glaring headlines carried on the front pages of our dailies. Osman writes he will be on hand for Oxford County Fair, as usual. He started following the show when small boys crawled under the fence. Now days the reporter's badge is a passport at the main entrance and this versatile veteran never fails to unearth live stuff that many news gatherers snub.

A slim, good-looking man under 30 called at this office, Friday, the 22nd. He was soliciting money on a subscription paper, to assist him to go through a linotype school in Boston. He was deaf, having lost his hearing five years ago. He claimed to come from Portland. He had no recommendations and was simply acting the part of a gentleman beggar. He didn't even get the permission of the proper town officer to solicit aid in this community. He promised to do so, but didn't.

Carl E. Stone, chemist, son of Stone, the druggist of Norway was routed by this office to Rochester, N. H. He is to call on Prof. John French, who is an uncle of his and lives at Northwood Narrows, N. H. Mr. Stone arrived from Indianapolis, Ind., Thursday night with his wife and daughter, who will spend their vacation here with relatives. They made the trip by rail with fine connections. Mr. Stone says that he has never tried the trip by auto but plans to some time and take in the points of interest along the way.

The Advertiser vacationists drifted in Monday morning for work. Mrs. Rachel Brown from a week at home doing an extra job at house work, canning strawberries, etc., and a week at her former home at Kittery and Hampton Falls; Prince Steward from two weeks spent with his wife at the DeCoster Cottage at Old Orchard Beach and Walter C. Smith, who appears now and again to give a helping hand between excursions of the Caravan. We were glad to welcome them back, to light into the work and ease up the pressure. Arthur Higgins, who also works here, left Saturday morning with the militia to be away for two weeks doing militia duty.

Mrs. C. K. Denning of Pigeon Hill was in town Monday afternoon, and called at the office. Mrs. Denning is our correspondent from the Hill and having missed getting her items in the morning mail delivered them in person as she said, "She knew we were anxious to receive early in the week." We appreciate that spirit of co-operation for, as we stated some weeks ago, we do need the items, as well as the change of ads, as early in the as possible, so as to get the Advertiser from the press early Thursday afternoon.

The following really makes the old man blush, but it's what Gene Lane of Berlin, N. H., says when paying for his paper:

"I have enjoyed the Advertiser for the passed six months and no doubt will for the next six

More Pep in the Advertiser than any paper I have known since Vaughn edited the Laconia, N. H., Democrat.

I reckon it's a fisherman that makes a good editor, or did you get your schooling from Artemus Ward who used to work on the Advertiser"

Jack Rutherford and Lawrence Connory of Montclair, N. J., were recent callers. They have been "doing" the Maine Sea Coast and are on their way back home. They wanted to get routed to White River Junction.

Roger Hutchins of Brooklyn, N. Y., is keeping the office informed on the verbal fight as a climax to the Dempsey-Sharkey fistic scrap. Roger sent us a raft load of clippings giving sides of the argument and a lot of photographs to prove or disprove that Sharkey lost of a foul. The sport editor on the face of the returns is as yet unable to settle the question and retires from the case. We venture this hunch that the question will never be settled to the satisfaction of fandom at large.

Earl Swan, Alpine Street, appreciates our Intelligence Column so this time offers for sale a motorcycle once used on the State highway patrol. Read his ad and if so inclined, start something.

"What's that thing on the pole?" remarked Fred Barnes, as he gazed in blank amazement at the switch-box controlling the light on the silent policeman at Advertiser corner. After the explanation, Fred remarked, "Well, one in Norway can learn a new one any day."

Stephen B. Cummings ordered tickets this week for the course of lectures to be given by Leon Campbell of Harvard Observatory. The ad for the first lecture on August 12, apears in this paper. Prof. Campbell will arrive, with his family, about August 4, and occupy Mrs. Emma Swan's camp at Lake Pennesseewassee during the month. He plans to bring a four-inch equitorial telescope for the use of our local star gazers. The August shower of meteors is due the week of his first lecture and he may tell us a whole lot about "falling stars."

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn R. McIntire have returned from their Canadian trip and have commenced housekeeping in the rent over Maxim's garage at the corner of Main and Whitman Streets.

Ned Packard: "Yes, I'm building from the top down; roof goes on first. It's out of the usual but it's my house you know!"

To Our Summer Guests

You are welcomed to our villages and hamlets, to our hills, our mountains and our woods and lakes. We are glad to welcome you among us at this season of the year when all nature is lending a helping hand to make Maine, the Pine Tree State, the Mecca of the summer visitor. We are glad to have you with us and wish to do our part to make your sojourn here so pleasant that you will want to return again another year.

Col. Geo. H. Havens of Providence, R. I., called Saturday to pay his respects. He is spending his vacation in Maine touring with Neil Paterson's Scotch Highlanders who appeared in the opening program of Radcliffe Chautauqua. He is only a show fan who enjoys trouping and sightseeing. Some years ago the Colonel had a taste of Maine fishing at Tim Pond and vicinity. That was before the age of good roads and where big trout made life happy.

Prof. F. E. Bristol of New York, and Harrison, made us a call, early Monday morning and left us an order for some dodgers announcing the Grand Concert by Myrna Sharlow of musical fame at the Bungalow Playhouse at Harrison, Saturday evening in connection with the Old Home Day celebration. Also ordered a supply of 4 page programs for use the night of the Concert. Mr. Bristol is very active for a man of his years and is engaged in giving music lessons at his Harrison Studio besides assisting with the Concert. His daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harriet Bristol and two year old daughter, also Mrs. Bristol's mother, Mrs. Morgan returned to Harrison with him. Mrs. Harriet Bristol will assist in the Concert, Saturday evening, and the little granddaughter, Mary Louise Bristol of Norway, will make her first stage appearance on her second birthday with Miss Sharlow and Miss Gould in scenes from Madame Butterfly.

Homer Luck, the contractor, presented us a hand made spike and nail from the John T. Crooker house, so called, on Bridge St. now owned by C. B. Cummings & Sons Co. The house was built for a residence before Civil War days and the nails were probably hammered out in the blacksmith shop that once stood on Water Street. Extensive repairs are being made and the building once used in late years for a store house will in time become a novelty mill. While ripping out some handwork, Homer found a U. S. cent dated 1820, and C. F. Davis captured a New Brunswick coin marked 1861.

The Advertiser has received an invitation to Exercises at Camp Wigwam, Harrison, Aug. 1, which is Campers' Day. A fine program will conclude Act 1 of Make Believe, a drama presented by the Wigwam Players, directed by Valentine P. Newmark. A song contest for a silver trophy will bring out the sportsmanship of several camps that have entered the race.

William H. Smith of the Maurice C. Smith Co., of Providence, R. I., was in Saturday. He was on his way to the White Mountains with his family and incidentally called in on his way to inquire about the working of our press numbering machines. We had him send two in to the factory to be overhauled.

An office visitor, Tuesday morning was Frances Billedeau of Suffield, Ct., and Joe Lary of Round Pond. Frances lived with Mr. and Mrs. Lary at Gilead and then at Round Pond, until two years ago. She is now living with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Venzie, at Suffield, Ct., and they are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Lary. Tuesday they all spent the day at Gilead. Miss Frances was delighted to visit her former home and equally delighted were Mr. and Mrs. Lary, to have her with them for a time. Miss Frances is 9 years old.

Howard Moulton of Conway, N. H., of the well known tailors, Allard & Moulton, once located in the Noyes Block, now removed, said he shook the hand of bridegroom "Picture Bill" DeCroteau in Conway. The bride was in an auto across the street so he missed an introduction. Mr. and Mrs. DeCroteau were on the first lap of their honeymoon trip and headed for Canada.

Charles E. Buswell, 22 Elm Street, wants berry pickers and uses the Intelligence Column to broadcast that fact. Mr. Buswell has a large field of cultivated raspberries with "easy picking" so to speak. Mrs. Buswell, who placed the ad, said there would be a large crop and many pickers are needed. Children with nimble fingers and not too "kiddish" may find a job there. Read the Intelligence Column for detailed information.

E. E. Maxfield of Adams Camps, No. Lovell, reports the best spring fishing ever at Kezar Lake. Bass are now biting and occasionally a salmon. He says his business has increased this season over what he had thus far last season.

Norway Municipal Court

Wm. F. Jones, Judge

On Tuesday, Mike Williams, one of the road crew waived examination and pleaded not guilty to threatening bodily harm to Geo. E. Leighton, the complainant. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the October term in the sum of $1,000. Henry H. Hastings appeared for the state and Mr. Abbott of Alton C. Wheeler's office for the respondent.

WELL BABY CONFERENCE

This conference differs from the clinic held periodically by Miss Ricker of the Maine Baby Saving Society.

There is no doctor. The mother of any baby appearing to need a formula or other medical care will be asked to see her physician.

This conference is offered weekly to the parents of all children under school age. Only the babies under a year usually need be weighed weekly. A monthly weighing is sufficient for older children unless there is some reason for doing it oftener.

Every Friday afternoon the nurse will be in the office of the Norway Nursing Service at 174 Main St. Mothers are invited to bring the baby between two o'clock and half past four. In villages and cities the country over are thousands of mothers who are depending on weekly weighing of infants for accurate information as to progress. If the baby fails to gain during only a few weeks, he is very soon a pound or two underweight.

The Board of Assessors and Fire Engineers of Norway Village Corporation made a hydrant pressure test Monday, with the following result, the start 85 lbs., two streams 70 lbs., four streams 61 lbs., six streams, 40 lbs. The South Paris system was turned in the local main and the pressure was raised to 48 pounds where it remained during the test.

Dollar Day was last Saturday and rain fell to help celebrate that event. Somehow wet weather has the habit of filling the occasion and is taken into consideration when the merchants make plans for the day.

Flivvering for Fun

Leslie Totten and Tom Rogers of Waltham, Mass., who are on a vacation tour in one of Henry's ancient models, have been guests at Howard Shaw's.

The boys left Saranac Lake, N. Y., Tuesday, at 8:30 A. M. and rattled into Howard Shaw's door yard at 7 P. M. This was some good time for the Ford that had seen better days and in the market for an obituary notice.

They made the trip through Vermont and touched up New Hampshire, reaching Maine at Gilead. In Vermont road construction and through detours rattled Lizzie's bones, so a fair estimate of normal condition was not possible, the boys said.

The carefree outfit's destination is Bar Harbor where the travelers expect a job through August.

FINDING BLESSINGS

I've been finding lots of blessings
All along life's rugged way
Till I have a goodly harvest
In my treasure house to-day.
Every step that I have taken,
Every path that I have known,
Has been scattered full of blessings
That to-day I call my own.
Here a smile and there a teardrop,
Now a hand so kind and true,
Now a little word of comfort,
Making all the world seem new.
All about and far above me,
Up the mountain side so steep,
I have come on finding blessing
That was mine to know and keep.
Now a letter kindly written
From a friend so kind and true
That I count a blessing, ever,
Coming to me, friend, from you.
Now a softly falling blessing
That shall rest upon my head,
Coming from our Heavenly Father,
When at night I go to bed.

Variable Stars

Of all the known stars, over a billion and a half, some 5200 of them are what are known as variable stars. They are variable because they change periodically in different degrees of luster.

One of the stars is a short variable, of a period of 2.8 days, called Algol (the Demon Star). About 85 per cent of the whole number of stars belong to a class known as long periods and are from 50 to 300 days and a few are of 600 and over.

These have a period of brightest luster at maximum, to minimum or faintest luster, and of varying temperatures of 2300C degrees surface temperature at maximum to several hundred degrees less at minimum.

Dr. Hale of Mt. Wilson calls them "cosmic crucibles" and high as the temperature seems to be, the laboratories of today are able to attain those of a much higher degree.

From a paper read last October, 26th, 1926 before the American Association of Variable Star Observers at Harvard Observatory, Cambridge, Mass., the astronomer Paul W. Merrill, as observer at Mt. Wilson, we cite, "we study them (long periods) not only as astronomical bodies but as physical aggregates of matter and energy from which we increase our knowledge of atoms and electrons and the fundamental laws which they obey. It seems incredible that we should be able to study the detailed structure of atoms by observing objects billions of miles distant and invisible to the naked eye, but this is one of the every-day facts of astrophysical research."

The long period variable stars tell us of their distance away. "The light of a long period variable is a long time on its way to us. The interval of time between its emission by the atoms of the star and its reception by the human retina or photographic plate at the end of a terrestial telescope stretches over hundreds or even thousands of years. Studies of long period variables by several methods have yielded fairly definite results as to their distances. These are conservatively tabulated according to the apparent visual magniture at maximum as follows:

Average distance of long period variables.

Maximum magnitude	Light years away
3.0	390
4.0	540
5.0	750
6.0 limit of naked eye visibility	1040
7.0	1450
8.0	2000
9.0	2800
10.0	3900

"Long period variables are particularly interesting, spectrascopically, because by watching a few weeks we can see remarkable changes taking place. This is not true of stars in general for in most cases we should probably have to watch for millions of years to detect any significant changes.

The low densities of the stars have already taught us a good deal about atoms and radiation, and we have yet much more to learn from these gigantic low-density laboratories.

The effect of the great distances of the variables is greatly to diminish the intensity of their light but the character of each individual ray appears to be absolutely unchanged by its long journey through space.

"It is red or blue when it leaves the star, it is red or blue when it arrives at earth centuries later and the minutest spectral details are accurately preserved. The mechanism by means of which light is transmitted, is evidently a very exact one; able to carry a beam at the terrific speed 1(86.00 miles per second) for centuries on end without altering its intricate structure in the slightest. Thus the light of a star can be analyzed just as if it had been from the laboratory ten feet away.

The immense distances of the variables give no difficulty in this connection except to render their light inconveniently faint."

Polaris, the North Star, around which all the stars seem to swing, is a variable with a period of almost four days and is at a distance of 200 light years.

The famous variable in coil o Mira (the wonderful) has a diameter larger than any known star except Antares, whose diameter is 260 millions of miles.

Life's Story

From Sailing Vessels to Street Cleaning

As Told by George Tripp

"I'll be 76 at my next birthday, Aug. 28th," thus said George Tripp, who pushes a cart and operates a shovel and broom in keeping Main Street clean. He don't dodge autos. Stands motionless when cars come close to clipping him.

"If you keep dodging you'll get winged," was his wise remark. "Hain't been hurt yet, but may be some day. Can't say."

"My mother died when I was 8 years old and father when I was 10. I went aboard a sailing vessel as cabin boy, out of Portland Harbor, when eleven. Followed the sea 30 years. Been wet, shipwrecked, hungry, as well as thirsty, but have survived. What education I've got was on a sailing vessel. Worked up at it. Liked it. Quit it and come inland some years ago."

"I get up in the morning at 4:30, get a bite and am on my job one hour later and clean up the streets before the rush of cars begins. That is the way."

"Here is a badge I got," showing a gold medal hitched to a suspender button. "It came from California and is genuine gold. I don't tell who gave it to me. It's a good one."

"After I get my work in hand I sit on some convenient step, watch, think, and smoke. When duty calls, I strike out with cart and broom. That done, I rest and watch."

"Yes, I do my own cooking, washing and cleaning and live in a shack near Harry Lovejoy's. Used to live year through in a tent and didn't freeze or burn up," thus soliloquized the Norway street sweeper.

"I liked the sea, but am a little too clumsy to go aloft and too, there isn't much call for men for sailing vessels these days."

"Yes, I've seen 'em sew up a body in canvas, weighted with cannon balls, and chuck it overboard. Yellow fever took a lot of 'em on one trip. I escaped somehow. My time to go hadn't come and it ain't here yet, even though I'll be 76 next month." 29tf

NORWAY FARM BUREAU WOMEN

The women of the Norway Farm Bureau will hold an all day meeting with the Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Effie Bradeen, Friday, at Norway Grange Hall, commencing at 10:30 o'clock. The subject for the work is Basket Bottom Chair Seating. This work is done with the flat reed, or split ash and the chairs must be of the old fashioned type with rounds to work around rather than holes to work through, as in the cane seated chairs. Bring a chair, some old scissors, pliers, and take home a new chair bottom. Dinner at noon.

Two delegates will be appointed to attend the Basketry training class at South Paris Grange Hall, next week, Wednesday, August 3rd. This work will be in pine needles and raffia. The delegates who go will teach the Norway women the work at a later meeting.

Mrs. Harry O. Stimson has returned from a visit with her son, Clyde Stimson, and family, at Conway, N. H.

Hiram Richardson, year old son of Mr and Mrs. Ben Richardson, is gaining from the effects of falling on a garden rake. The wound caused by a tooth entering his forehead is healing and hemorrhages have been checked.

Mrs. Fred S. Brown entertained friends Friday evening for a dinner dance. Plans had been made for a garden party and dinner on the lawn, but lowering clouds forced a change, so the tables were spread indoors. The rooms were very attractive with decorations of larkspur, foxglove and gaillardia. Following the dinner, the rooms were cleared for dancing. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Leander Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John Pierce, Portland; Mrs. C. W. Areson, New York; Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Stewart, Mrs. Leslie L. Mason, Donald K. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Gray, Andrew Eastman, South Paris; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Pendexter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Smith, and daughter, Miss June, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Burnell, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen O. Jellerson.

Chas. H. Masury of Peabody, Mass., writes he expects to lead a party of friends to Bass Island, Lake Pennesseewassee on or about August 6. This will make his forty-sixth year about the lake and the anticipation of a happy camping trip is fully realized.

Thirty-five young people, representing the First and Second Congregational Churches, met with the new pastor, the Rev. Raymond Morgan, in the vestry of the village church, early Sunday evening. The purpose of the meeting was to get acquainted. An informal discussion on the meaning of life was led by Mr. Morgan, and there was a fine response. The discussion will continue next Sunday evening from the point at which it came to an end. The pastor will again lead the discussion. The motto, "Live and Help Live," as opposed to the more general idea of "Live and Let Live" will be taken as the center of the discussion.

The church school will go on vacation after next Sunday until the first Sunday in September.

DUG GOLD IN SWIFT RIVER

B. F. Faunce and son, John, of Johnstown, Pa., and E. S. Cummings of Norway returned from a few days hunt of fish and gold in the Swift River region.

A short stay was made at Cummings' Camp at Bemis, lake and brook (not closed), were fished. Some gold was found in the river. Mr. Faunce got a fine specimen of gold to take back to Pennsylvania with him.

He plans on going home, starting Friday and arriving at Johnstown, Sunday.

Home Town Helps

TREES REQUIRE PROPER CARE

Merely Planting One Under Good Conditions Will Not Be Found to Give Full Satisfaction.

The lack of care of home landscape becomes most noticeable at this season. In this statement I refer to the care of trees on our lawns, says a writer in the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Many times we notice buckeye trees, as well as many other species, with the leaves all eaten off, after which a second crop of leaves appears only to be killed by the frost. This is hard on the life of the tree. The city has spent a great deal of money on the planting and care of trees, while the average citizen considers a tree a permanent fixture of the house. A band our town requires and can support. of fly paper is sometimes put around the trunk and does some good for a short time, then becomes dry and useless, whereas a band of cotton will last a full season or even several seasons. A band of cotton prevents worms from attacking the tree, thereby keeping it looking better longer. It is not "too much trouble" nor "too expensive." The average person will spend much more time on a few flowers, for which I do not condemn them, but they last only one season, while the trees that should last many years, die prematurely from the lack of a little attention. There is, of course, much more work to make a tree last its maximum life, but a little attention adds many years to its existence.

HAVE STAKE IN COMMUNITY

Small-Home Owners Always the Most Stable Portion of the American Population.

John H. Puelicher, president of the American Bankers' association, remarked in an indorsement of a statement that "the most stable population of America has always been the small-home owner."

"English colonists," writes Mr. Puelicher in the National Real Estate Journal, "secured the right to hold property—they became established. That ownership brought a higher form of civilization, a desire to live happily as a community of individuals, each respecting the rights of others. It brought greater contentment. It encouraged the people to work and develop their holdings, since the improvement and betterment of these result in reward to the owner.

"Today a man who owns his home or his farm is, in a measure, owned by his home or his farm. There are so many elements of respectability that come to him who finds permanent shelter for his loved ones. It is a force for law, since a home owner desires protection by law. He acquires respect for the property of others. He wants good, sound government and desires to become an advocate of law and order. Ownership makes him vigilant. I think it was Gladstone who said: 'Property always sleeps with one eye open.'"

How to Plant Fruit Trees.

To plant fruit trees instead of shade trees it is first necessary to give the trees plenty of room. Two perfect trees will fill the back yard of a 50-foot lot; and any other trees in that space will crowd them. One must be prepared to give more care to fruit trees than to shade trees, and spraying and pruning a specimen 26 feet high is quite a job. Pear and cherry trees need less attention than apples, but a good yield of fruit requires not less than three sprayings in a season, and sometimes more than that. The more vigorous shade trees will need no spraying at all, unless attacked by an unusual insect invasion.

There is little doubt that the trouble given to mature fruit trees is well repaid by their production, and there is no doubt whatever that fruit can be produced in back yards equal in quality to any on earth and far superior to that obtained in the markets, because it can be ripened on the tree and eaten when just right.

Community Building

Well to Provide Now for Future of City

American cities, with their present rapid growth and the increasing demand for homes away from the crowded section, are constantly breaking over their boundary lines and overflowing into new territory. The march of an urban population into the region still under the township authority brings some large problems. Haphazard development of the outlying territories, plots laid out without reference to the way in which they conform to the city's plan of arterial streets, residence lots parceled out far from water and sewer connections, hampering of the semi-urban territory by legal restrictions as to township expenditure framed to meet the needs of a purely rural township, these are some of the growing pains of suburban territories.

The creation of metropolitan areas, or districts, is the device which modern cities have evolved to aid in the adjustment of these difficulties. The National Association of Real Estate Boards will undertake a study of how far American cities have devised successful plans for the development of suburban territories through metropolitan areas and will hold a national round-table discussion of subdividers looking to the encouragement of workable plans and toward the spread of such methods of subdivision development as will make for sound and healthy city growth.

Start Drive to Clean Up City's Back Yard

"Let's clean up our back yard."

That's the cry of the industrial development committee of the Cleveland Real Estate board which is planning a campaign which has for its purpose the "sprucing up" of those sections of industrial plants visible to the casual passer-through on the railroads.

The cleanup movement offers various advantages. First, the chance to do some very effective advertising for itself by presenting a good appearance to those passing through on trains. Second, it advertises Cleveland.

In some cities where such a movement has been undertaken, attractive planting along the right-of-way has been made a part of the campaign.

The American Railway Development association has passed a resolution pledging its co-operation in the realtor movement for spruce and business-like appearance in industrial areas. Individual railroads are co-operating through their development departments.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Dull Fellow

By FRANK WALL

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

EVERY one smiled when Johnson returned to the office this morning from his vacation. Two weeks ago he walked out at five o'clock as quietly as if he were only going for the evening, and this morning he came back just as quietly. What does a man like that want with a vacation anyway?

"He's such a dull fellow," murmured Billy" Delaine languidly. "If ever I want to die of ennui I'll make him fall in love with me."

Johnson didn't hear her, and it wouldn't have made any difference if he had. He was trying to concentrate his attention on his job and that was taking all his energy.

This dull fellow was shaken to the soul. He had gone away as part of the routine of life. There had been a time when the thought of a vacation would have conjured up wonderful pictures in his mind, but nothing now seemed able to give him a thrill. Perheps he lived too much in a groove. Where the others looked on life as a series of gay adventures to be sought deliberately as one seeks entertainment in a theater, he took his adventures on paper. He found his romance in the short stories he wrote so unfailingly in all his spare time. Sometimes he wondered if he was chasing the shadow and missing the substance of life; yet he must have known that romance and passion are always round the corner. One is liable to run into them at any time.

And that indeed was what happened to this dull fellow, and perhaps that was what made him take his experience so seriously. He had lived in a world of illusions, you see, creating people to suit himself, playing with the imaginary passions of imaginary men and women, and now fate was playing with him.

He went to the coast prepared to enjoy himself in his own quiet fashion, and on his first day there he met Daphne Russell, whom he had known years ago. He would have walked past her in his absent-minded way, but she came up and greeted him; and even then he didn't know her at first. There was some excuse for him, too, for in the intervening years since their last meeting, she had changed almost beyond recognition.

What is the feminine equivalent for a dull fellow? Whatever it was, that was the way Daphne had been heading as inexorably as rivers head to the sea. Then she went to live in Canada, and Johnson had not seen her for seven years, and now, when he met her he could only stare at her in amazement.

For this piece of lovely wistfulness was not the Dahpne he had known. Her profile had taken on an exquisite delicacy. Her mouth trembled to a thousand moods. Passion stirred wistfully in her dark eyes. Her hair looked as if painted by moonlight.

Something leaped in Johnson's heart, something that flamed passionately and throbbed and hurt.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you," she cried. "I came back from Canada and I couldn't find any one I knew. It seemed as though all my friends had gone. And then I came here for a lonely vacation and I met you."

"Your vacation isn't going to be lonely at all," said Johnson firmly. "I am the Committee of Welcome appointed to meet you. After you've been through our program you'll never want to leave home again."

"You talk in just your old lovely way," she murmured contentedly. "I never knew whether you were in earnest or not."

And he looked at her quietly. "Yes," he said. "I never was so much in earnest."

And after that a new life began for Johnson and perhaps for Daphne also. They had long evenings of the most perfect comradeship, evenings when the whole world seemed to be drenched with sheen beauty. That was the way he saw it anyway. It brought him out of his shell amazingly. He became gay, brilliant, tender, all in turn, until it seemed that Daphne must have transferred to him some of her own secret of living vividly. Life danced ahead of him, beckoning, leading him on, whispering all kinds of wonderful promises; and he believed them all.

And so the vacation went by, each day sinking in turn into that strange, bottomless pit men call the past, and leaving in its place one still more wonderful. And to both Daphne and Johnson, as the last day approached, there came a resolution which they guarded resolutely from each other until the time should come.

They sat together staring at the sea on that last evening. The beauty of the night was all about them, enfolding them in its strange glamour. Johnson turned slowly and looked into the wistful loveliness of Daphne's eyes. He leaned towards her, and she turned.

"I've something to tell you," she said.

There was a queer dryness in his throat. He couldn't speak.

"I was married in Canada. Five years of perfect love and comradeship—and then he died. I think my heart died with him." A little sigh broke the silence. She turned to him again. "You were going to say something?" she said, quietly.

Johnson shook his head. All his new world had toppled about his ears. He was just a dull fellow again. They noticed it as soon as he entered the office this morning.

LIVE STOCK NEWS

STOMACH WORMS IN SHEEP CAUSE LOSS

That stomach worms in sheep may be held in check and loss prevented by copper sulphate treatment is shown by some 90 lambs recently slaughtered at the Ohio experiment station.

Examination of the stomachs of the group of untreated lambs which had been running with infested, untreated ewes on permanent blue grass pasture showed heavy infestation with stomach worms. Another group under the same management except that they received the copper sulphate treatment at weaning time and once each month for four months thereafter showed only 10 per cent as much infestation as the untreated lambs. Another group receiving nicotine sulphate treatment showed almost 30 per cent as much infestation as the untreated lambs.

Lambs on pasture until weaning time with infested ewes, and then placed on continuous rape forage, showed rather heavy infestation. Eight lambs of this lot received four treatments of copper sulphate. Three of these treated lambs were entirely free from worms, and only 53 worms were found in the other five.

Lambs kept in the barn with infested, untreated ewes until weaning and then placed on rape forage and given the four treatments of copper sulphate were raised entirely free from stomach worms. Thirty-two lambs raised in this manner whether with or without medicinal treatment showed but one nodule of nodular disease. The others were entirely free while the lambs with and without treatment, on permanent pasture, all showed nodular disease.

The copper sulphate or blue stone treatment was prepared by dissolving one ounce powdered blue stone in two quarts of water. Each lamb was given two-thirds to one and one-third ounce (20 to 40 c. c.) depending on age.

The nicotine sulphate treatment was prepared by mixing 10 c. c. (two teaspoonfuls) of "Black Leaf 40" with one quart of water. One to two ounces was given to each lamb depending on age.

Barley Found Excellent for Growing Fat Lambs

What with the keen competition for available corn between hogs and cows, it may leave the sheep to shift as best they may on leavings. Sheep do quite well on farm wastes, but this has been the trouble with sheep raising in some localities—they have been forgotten until all other animals have been well provided. Barley is one kind of grain that grows well in our best sheep sections, and good barley has been found nearly equal to corn for growing fat lambs, or for older sheep where some legume hay is on hand, says the Wisconsin Farmer. Where other hay is used barley and 10 per cent of oil meal or cottonseed meal will give good maintenance and gains.

Where conditions warrant it, or where the quality of the balance of the ration requires grain for breeding ewes, there is nothing better than equal parts of barley and wheat bran, by weight. One-half of a pound or a little more of this concentrate daily per head will answer requirements. After the ewes have lambed and milk flow needs to be sustained, then make the ration three-fourths of a pound of bran and barley, and perhaps add 10 per cent of oil meal to it. For the small lambs on their first grain feed we mention the ration used sometimes by Frank Kleinheinz, Wisconsin shepherd. This is ten pounds each of ground barley and ground oats, 20 pounds of wheat bran, and one pound of oil meal. The lambs should have access to a separate trough by means of a creep. There is no objection to mutton produced on rather heavy barley feed.

Farmers Urged to Keep Hog Herds in Condition

"This is a time to stick to hogs." This was the word left by Gilbert Gusler, market expert of Chicago, who spoke to farmers and university men at the annual Swine Feeders' day at University farm, St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. Gusler also thought it was a time to watch costs and to sell at a little lighter weight than usual, especially where the farmer does not have enough corn of his own raising to finish out his hogs fully. He advised against selling in a skippy condition, however, because such hogs will be plentiful and will be discriminated against.

"After the winter run begins to diminish, hog prices can be expected to rise," said Mr. Gusler. "It need not surprise anyone to see a $12 top on the hog market at Chicago by next March."

No Great Competition for These Odd Jobs

Although at the present time almost every profession is overcrowded, there are still a few that have only one follower.

For instance, out of the seven and a half million people in London there is only one moss gatherer. Twice a week this man pushes a barrow to a spot several miles out of the city, where he gathers his moss, and later sells it for decorative purposes.

At the last census taken in England a man stated that he was a walrus mustache collector. The hairs are used for the purpose of making toothpicks, and as far as is known he is the only person who follows that profession.

There is only one lady veterinary surgeon in England. A British firm employs a man whose job is simply to strike matches in order to test them.

Still another of these unusual jobs is that of toad breeder. There is one man who does this, and he sells his toads to gardeners for the purpose of destroying insect pests.

There is no overcrowding in these jobs!

Layers of Warm and Cold Waters in Lakes

It has been found that some of the salt lakes in Hungary present the peculiarity of a layer of warm, or even hot, salt water between two bodies of colder water. Thus, in the Medoc lake, the surface temperature in summer is about 70 degrees, but at a depth of a little more than four feet the temperature becomes 133 degrees, declining again to 66 degrees at the bottom.

The surface water is fresh, but the warm water beneath is intensely saline, and the explanation of the difference of temperature is that, since the specific heat of salt water is less than that of fresh water, the salt water is more easily heated by the sun, and, having risen to a higher temperature than that of the overlying fresh water, retains its heat, because the fresh water prevents its escape by radiation. It is suggested that some use might be found for these natural reservoirs or accumulators of solar heat.

Dead wood should be removed from evergreens whenever discovered. Other pruning should be done as new growth is starting. Many evergreens do not start growth from old wood, so the pruning should not be severe enough to remove all the growing shoots from any branch.

DISLIKES ADVERTISING ROAD SIGNS

Herbert Johnson of Huntington Valley, Pa., registers a kick regarding advertising road signs. He says:

"I am writing, however, to register a protest, in the name of all that's fine and lovely in New England, against the horrid desecration of the roadsides from Cape Ann to Portland, with signboards. The motor trip today has been emphatically unpleasant, tiresome and distressing. My family and I have looked forward to enjoying the scenery of your beautiful State. We have not enjoyed it. We have not seen a single mile of unspoiled landscape all day."

We feel sorry for Mr. Johnson and family. He better come further inland where signs are not so numerous. Come up into Oxford County where the disturbing business world is less seen and the wilderness is nearby.

Good Church Attendance—Dramatic Recital Sunday Evening.

Go To Church Sunday evidently made an impression upon our community. Over one hundred attended the morning service on that Sunday and over seventy-five attended last Sunday morning. It seems like old times to see the church so well filled.

Denmark is going to have one of the greatest treats it has had in some time next Sunday night, when Mrs. Hazel Chandler Parks gives a dramatic recital in the Congregational Church at 7:30 p. m. Mrs. Parks is a graduate of the Leland Powers School of Boston and has given dramatic recitals in all sections of the country. She organized and traveled with her own company for many seasons. Ordinarily she receives a great sum of money for each recital, but, through the kindness of Mrs. Elizabeth Jewett, she is donating her services to help the cause along in our community. The recital is free to all. Mrs. Parks is gifted with a pleasing personality and a fine speaking voice. With these as a foundation, her thorough training and wide experience in the concert world have made her an acknowledged leader in her profession. She has the power of portraying characters in a natural, dramatic manner, ever ceasing to be artificial, and adhering to refined, artistic work. The church should be packed to the doors.

FRYEBURG—TOLL BRIDGE

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Merrill of Norway, and Nellie Charles spent Saturday night with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant McAlister, starting early Sunday morning on an automobile trip to Albion. Mr. and Mrs. G. McAlister and daughter, Muriel, and Nellie Charles accompanied the Merrills where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. C. D. McAlister and daughter, Leona, and Frank Bubier, at East Waterford and Harold Fields of Auburn. The trip of some 200 miles extended through Auburn where they called on Mr. and Mrs. Austin McAlister and their aunt, Lydia McKeen and Lizzie McKeen and from there to Lewiston, Green, Winthrop, to Augusta, where they ate their picnic dinner and took some snapshots of the beautiful places. Augusta surely has some beautiful sights for tourists. After dinner they motored to Waterville, Winslow, and Albion, where they visited an hour with Mr. Merrill's and Mrs. Rebecca McAlister's sister, Mrs. Chester Ash. A very pleasant trip was enjoyed. This makes a nice trip for autoists and proves that we do not have to go out of our own dear State of Maine for a wonderful sight-seeing trip of lakes, mountains, flowers, and handsome buildings and everything Nature and skill can show.

Lynn Police Dog Buried With Honors

O. W. Brown, a Norway boy, and prominent news writer on the Boston Herald, without form or ceremony, sent to his publisher, a dog story that touched the heart strings of dog lovers. The Herald carried the story, which was immediately wired by the Associated Press to the far corners of North America.

All who respect the faithful companions will appreciate the short, but human interest, story, that speaks volumes in favor of the Police Department in Lynn, Mass.

The Story

Four police officers in dress uniform, acted as bearers today when funeral services were held for Brownie, police dog, which had developed rabies from mongrel animals, which had been picked up on the street, and temporarily detained at police headquarters. A police surgeon administered cyanide of potassium to end Brownie's suffering.

Soon after the death, the body was placed in a box and carried by motor patrol to the city burying ground, where it was placed in a grave, while the four policemen stood by with heads uncovered. The dog was four years old and had been attached to the day division for three years.

Osmon has received several letters of commendation for his thoughtfulness in so honoring a "mere" dog. J. T. Fitzgerald of Ontario, Can., sent the following note of appreciation to the Chief of Police at Lynn.

The Commendation

I don't know Lynn. I don't know you. I don't know any of your men. But I do know this:

You have four men in that force at least, who are big enough to do a thing that to the wiseacres of the present day may have seemed small. I refer to the burial they gave "Brownie," and of which I have just read in a Toronto paper. You may know there are people with cynical, barbed-wire souls, who would sneer at such a performance—people of the type who would gyp a man at his back and smile in his face and all in the one operation.

I am a dog lover first of all. I have shepherds or police dogs secondly, as my favorite breed. But more important than either of these, is the fact that I am drawn to those who have compassion and love for a dog. I am sure "Brownie" must have been worthy of the honor these four stout hearts paid him at the edge of his grave, and I am sure also that in his own doggy way, "Brownie" would have stood at the grave of any one of them with even a greater sense of irreparable loss than they felt for him. It seems to me that this little act of human kindness to a man's best and truest friend, was a thing which will mark the policemen of Lynn as MEN. Probably you will be good enough to pass this word on to those four fellows, so that they may know that somewhere, one at least has a kind word for what they have done.

It doesn't matter who or what I am apart from being a menial newspaper man. I have a heart for a dog. I see much in a good dog that I would like to see in more humans. I would like to see more humans like those four of the Lynn police force.

How I Kept My Health for 75 Years Or More

Gold prize winners in the contest among members of the Maine Three-Quarter Century Club, on "How I Kept My Health for 75 Years or More" conducted by the Maine Public Health Association, were announced today by the committee of Judges.

Mrs. Maria E. Fuller of Augusta, age 80 years, was awarded First Prize—Fifteen Dollars in gold. Second prize of ten Dollars in Gold went to Mrs. Helen M. French, age 84 years, of Athens, Maine and the third prize, Five Dollars in gold was awarded Rodney Quimby Lancaster, age 84 years of Howland, Maine.

The contest revealed the secret of Maine's famous Three-Quarter Century Club. The world has been amazed at the thousands of Maine residents who have qualified for membership in this unique organization by living to or beyond the age of 75 years. The explanation is found in the manuscripts submitted to this contest.

Almost without exception the scores of club members who entered the contest conducted by the health association ascribe their long life to the thoughtful care given them in infancy by mothers who nursed their babies with mother's milk; to many hours each day spent in the open air; to the plentiful use of fruits and vegetables and simple home-cooked food in their daily menu; to an average of at least eight hours rest each night and to wholesome recreation. Many of them placed emphasis on happiness as conducive to longevity. I have always made it a point to be relaxed and happy at meal time," is the rule of many who entered the contest.

"Parties in the olden days usually terminated at eleven o'clock, according to the writers. "If not, we could expect pa to drive over and see what was keeping us out so late," one of the writers said. Many of them greatly enjoyed dancing as a recreation. Sparing use of tea, coffee, intoxicants, highly seasoned foods and rich pastry was ascribed by many as a striking reason for their long and useful life. Almost all of them are early risers. Few of them attempted to give a word of advice to the young generation of today. "They wouldn't pay any attention to us anyway," is the refrain. "They will have to live and learn by experience as we did.

In making its awards the committee of judges found many manuscripts which were excellent and close competitors for the money prizes. It was decided to issue Certificates of Honorable Award to the following: Mrs. Melissa H. Jordan, Brunswick; Mr. John C. Minott, Bath; Mrs. Gracie Bowen, Morrill; Mr. Cyrus T. Wardwell, Lewiston; Mrs. Mary (Emerson) French, Levant; Mr. William D. Bowler, South Freedom; Mr. Robert L. Perrigo, Hodgdon; Mrs. Helene Isabelle (Paquet) Thivierge, Biddeford; Mr. Eben B. Hodgkins, Trenton; Mrs. Sara E. Mitchell, East Baldwin; Susan Pratt, Freeport; Clara Melinda Goodwin, Pittsfield; Mr. Wilder W. Perry, Camden; Harriet W. Pollard, South Orrington; Mrs. Lucia M. Rogers, Guilford; Mrs. P. D. Hudon; Mrs. H. D Irish, Buckfield; Joanna Butler Ramsdell, Clinton; Abbie J. Tubbs, Norway; Mr. F. N. Davis, Calais; Mr. James E. Richmond, Livermore Falls; Mr. Luther Maddocks, Boothbay Harbor; Mary J. Mason, Southwest Harbor; Mrs. Ellen L. Goodwin, Oakland; Mrs. Dora S. Hussey, Dover-Foxcroft; Mrs. Emma E. Danielson, Winterport; Mr. George W. Rounds

THE CHILD MENACE

We do not mean the great increase in the population, due to the large families under modern living conditions—these seem to have passed away very largely with the going of the pioneer families and mainly is being sustained by the children of immigrants from other nations, who have not forsaken their heritage of large families of strong, virile children, as many of longer American ancestry seem to have done.

We refer to the menace, to the motorist particularly but to the drivers of all vehicles on the public way, to the increasing tendency of little children to use the permanent highways of the state, with their concrete surfaces, as a playground. Sometimes this is shown in a tendency to run back and forth across the roadway without regard to automobiles which may be approaching, but the menace is more often due to children sitting and standing calmly on the concrete highway, with motor cars flashing past and drivers constantly on edge lest these little ones, unheedful of the danger, step suddenly into their path with inevitable results of disaster for the child and a shock to the driver that he'll never, if he be a real man, can forget.

Parents who cannot teach their little ones to keep away from this peril, should confine them within the yard limits of their homes. Self preservation is not only the first law of nature, but the preservation of these little ones intrusted to our care by a beneficient Creator, is a responsibility that no parent can afford to ignore. It's a trifle late to suffer remorse for disregard of these principles, when that disregard has cost a life that can never be replaced.

Get the Big Price for Your Hay

The quality of your hay determines the feeding value and the price. There is often a difference of from $4.00 to $10.00 per ton between choice hay and hay that grades No. 3. Increase your hay-land profits by air-curing your hay. Use a

John Deere Dain System Rake

Dain Features

Inclined frame—extra capacity.
Curved teeth, properly speeded—lift instead of dragging or kicking the hay.
Flexible frame and reel.
All adjustments made from the seat.
Exclusive tooth bar construction.
Either one or two caster wheels.

Air-cured hay is better hay. It holds its color. The leaves do not become brittle. There is little loss in handling. The hay keeps better in the mow, stack or bale, and is more palatable, more digestible and has greater feeding value. Whether you sell your hay or feed it, your profits are increased when you adopt the Dain system of making hay.

It does not cost you anything extra to air-cure hay. You merely use a Dain System Rake.

The Dain System Rake is the best for this purpose. It is the easiest to operate, and you can handle the heaviest hay because, with the inclined frame, the capacity is the greatest where the quantity of hay handled is largest. And, remember, the curved teeth of the rake lift the hay instead of kicking it.

Drop in and look over the Dain System Rakes we have in stock.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 17:1-58.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Boy Overcomes a Giant.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy's Brave Deed.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why David Was Not Afraid.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Victories of Faith.

I. The Contending Armies (17:1-3).

On the north side of the Valley of Elah, on the highlands, stood Saul and his army, and on the south side stood the Philistine hosts, eyeing each other for battle. According to an ancient custom, the Philistines, having a warrior among them of great strength, sought to decide the war by a combat between two selected champions. The nation whose champion was slain was to be subject unto the other.

II. The Champions (17:4-37).

1. Goliath of the Philistines. (a) He was a giant (v. 4), perhaps eleven and one-half feet in height. The appearance of such a man greatly intimidated the Israelites. Saul, who once was brave, made no attempt or effort to meet this giant.

(b) He was filled with proud conceit. His size, his panoply of war, and his strength, caused him to believe that no evil could befall him. His conceit became his snare.

(c) He was boastful. No doubt he was a much-talked-of man among the Philistines. Their possession of such a man recalled the former experience of their nation when Samson, the Israelite giant, wrought such great mischief among them.

(d) He was defiant. He openly defied the army of Israel—the people of the Most High. That is just like the champion of Satan's hosts now. He is becoming more and more defiant of the Lord's people, and ultimately will defy the Almighty Himself.

(e) He was scornful. He treated the Israelites with the utmost contempt. This is what Satan is doing daily. He treats God's people with the utmost contempt.

2. David, the Israelite.

In the providence of God, David was sent to the camp at a time to hear the blatant boasting of this proud and contemptible Philistine champion. His three eldest brethren were in the army, and his father sent him with some provisions for them as well as for the captain. While David was talking with his brothers, Goliath made his appearance. The sight of Israel's cowardice and lack of zeal for God prompted David to offer his services. Note the character of David. (a) A mere youth, a stripling not used to war. (b) He was courageous. When all Israel were afraid, he undertook this task. Besides, he had proven his bravery before in defending his flock against the lion and the bear. (c) He had a mighty faith in God. He argued that what God had done for him He would do again. (d) He had meekness and self-control. This he exhibited in a remarkable manner under the gibes of Eliab (v. 28). (e) He was skillful. He had become such an expert in the use of the sling that he had absolute confidence in the issue of his attack. He was not a blind enthusiast who disregarded the use of means, but was careful to use means, and most particular as to what they should be. He put aside the untried armor of Saul. He knew that God's will for him was to use by faith that which he had thought insignificant. This is God's will for us.

III. The Battle (vv. 38-48).

When Goliath beheld David coming up against him, he cursed him by his gods—Dagon, Baal, and Astarte, showing that it was not merely a battle between David and Goliath, but between true and false religion. David hasted and ran to meet Goliath. The stone from his sling smote Goliath in the forehead and he fell to the earth upon his face. David went forth in the name of the Lord of hosts—that all the earth might know that there was a God in Israel. The whole matter shows that the battle is not with the strong, but with those who put their trust in God.

IV. The Victory (vv. 49-58).

The Philistine champion was killed and the army routed. This victory is a phophecy of a greater one when the devil, the defiant enemy of God and man, shall be slain and his army put to flight. David is thus the type of Christ and Goliath a type of Satan. Goliath's sword was turned against himself and typified that Christ shall turn Satan's weapons against him for his own destruction.

Old Man Tells of Fourth of July Celebrations When He Was a Boy

Liston P. Evans, editor of the Piscataquis Observer, Dover-Foxcroft, has something to say of Fireworks and Patriotism of the Fourth. It so near agrees with our own experience at that early age, we give it place. Our early days were spent at Meredith Center, N. H.

"On the first day of July I met a small boy with a toy pistol and said to a passing friend, "I didn't have anything like that to celebrate with when I was a small boy"; he replied, "Why don't you write something about it; I like to read those articles"? And so I will although I have written some of it before.

My first recollection of July 4th, must date from my 9th year. Edwin Hill, who then lived in Garland, and later in Dover South Mills, did a light trucking business between Garland and Bangor and just before the Fourth he would bring up a limited supply of fire crackers.

His arrival in town caused as much excitement among the small boys as the signalling of the coming of a mailsteamer into the harbor of San Francisco among the inhabitants in the early days of that city, and I recall how I ran when I saw him for it was "first come, first served" and the boy who was late might not get any fire crackers.

And right here is a fact that has caused me some thought. My bunch of fire crackers cost 10 cents, which was all the money I had to spend in celebrating the day, and so I saved them until the mornings of the Fourth. But today the small boys have sufficient funds to enable them to celebrate at least two days and sometimes three.

George W. Harvey told me that when he was a small boy in Atkinson his father gave his two brothers older than he some money to come to Dover to a celebration. He went out in the morning and picked some strawberries and carried them to Atkinson to sell. He hoped to realize 10 cents from them but got only five, but that sum invested in candy and peanuts gave him an enjoyable day. Thus have conditions changed.

But to return to my celebrations when I was a little older, fire crackers did not produce sufficient noise and I resorted to a toy cannon which, when loaded with plenty of powder with grass rammed on the top gave very satisfactory results although attended by some danger.

Still later, when my patriotism demanded more noise, I and my associates resorted to anvils. It is doubtless known to some readers of this that when a liberal amount of gun powder placed between two anvils is ignited the resulting explosion is all that can be desired. In one instance it was more than we desired, for an anvil was broken and a piece of it went through a wagon wheel, taking some spokes with it. The cost of the repairs made necessary, depleted our celebration budget considerably.

For one Fourth I borrowed an old musket which hung fire but while I was making a close examination of the lock to see why it did not function it did function and my face was damaged by sparks. As I recall those and other boyhood experiences, I wonder how I am here to write this article.

The most exciting Fourth of my young days was in 1863. The Rebellion was in full swing and the small boys of Garland village were full of patriotism.

We had planned a special celebration, one feature of which was the hanging of Jeff Davis in effigy during the day. In the evening we gathered on the "gunhouse hill," which some readers of this will know was just across the "small pond" in the village, and burned the effigy, emptying shot guns into it in the mean time.

Certain Democrats, who in distinction from many of their party dared to place themselves on record as against the government, held a barbecue at Barton's grove on the Dexter road that day, calling it a "Peace Meeting."

One of the men who attended the meeting came from Bangor and passed the night in my home with his father, who boarded with us. That was but a short distance from our fire and as I knew the man was there, and where he had been, I hollowed specially loud so he could hear.

I do not recall that we were criticized for what we did and yet we had the same spirit that is evidenced by the lynchers in the South.

When I was probably 16, I was working in a "burnt piece" for a dollar a day, which sum is proof that I was a good boy to work. When the Fourth came, I decided to observe it regardless of the expense so set aside a day's wage for the purpose. I remained in Garland during the day and though I filled up on candy, peanuts and lemonade, I had money left when night came. That, you can see was before the "high cost of living." Today that money could easily be spent in a box of chocolates.

I will add that when Mr. Harvey and I were speaking of the advantages the present generation has over that of our young days we agreed in being glad of the improvement.

Streams of Autos Passing—Sunday Visitors—Twitchell's Visit in Upton—Auto Party Visit in Augusta

Now what? Well, rain for hay weather for one thing, green peas, beet greens, and other garden truck another Wayside stores, passing the hot dogs, ice cream and cold drinks, filling auto tanks with gas and the autos roll along one after, or passing, the other in a continual rumble way into small hours of the night and early at it in the morning again.

Those who gave us a call Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Waterhouse, Elmer Waterhouse, Judkins Cummings and Mrs. Jennie Cummings of West Paris, Miss Helmi Pulkkinen of Livermore and Lawrence Brown of Norway Center.

Mrs. and Miss Chestina Twitchell have returned home from their visit to Upton. They were sorry to leave Mrs. Twitchell's brother, A. W. Judkins ill, but glad to learn later that he was as comfortable, and a quick recovery hoped for. Other ways than Mr. Judkins' illness, the trip was most enjoyable.

Mrs. and Miss Chestina Twitchell and Flora Cummings spent the day Friday on Mechanic Falls campgrounds.

Saturday, July 23, Mrs. Cummings went to Augusta in company with Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McKeen, Mrs. Davis and Alton Ames. They visited at the Augusta asylum and our State House and called on Mrs. Davis' son's family Walter Davis of Greene on the way home.

Rev. Mr. Thurlow and family of Mechanic Falls were Saturday evening and supper guests at Ai Twitchell's Mr. and Mrs. Ai Twitchell were at Mechanic Falls one day last week spending a portion of it on the camp-grounds.

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Frank Watson and Mrs Mary Allen, motored to West Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Llewellyn and friends from Portland were Sunday guests at W. Twitchell's.

Mrs. A. M. Daniels and children from Paris Hill were callers at W. Twitchell's last Wednesday.

Miss Kathryn Richardson of Norway was a guest of Marjorie Twitchell last Thursday

WALKING DOWN TO BETHEL

Boston Newspaper Man Writes About Mountains and Other Sights, Also People, Including "The Companion"

"The Nomad" in Boston Transcript, July 11

Holy Hill, Maine

Alone and light-hearted I travel the open wood." Thus chants Whitman. Not alone, but certainly light-hearted, the Nomad has been traveling a New England road of diverse beauties and interests. In taking a cross-country hike, the important thing is to have a destination. In New England it does not matter so much where you begin, it is all good—but you need to have the end of the walk in happy view, as a sort of lodestone or rather as a comforting garment to put on after the toil and possible storms or dust of the journey.

The Nomad's destination on this trip was Holy Hill and its long, sunny slope, its garden full of foxgloves and sweet-williams and pinks, and the dormer windows in its roof, seemed to beckon to us and cheer us all through the six busy days of tramping. It was like the serene and smiling port after the sailor's more or less stormy voyage. And the path down to the lake, and the rippling of water around the boat-house—what a scene to anticipate, what a haven to sail to!

The beginning also was good. Having the destination so happily provided, it was comparatively easy to hit upon Gorham, N. H., as the starting-place. Going there by train, we had the mountains to give us their noble send-off. Thence down the Androscoggin—but only a little way by the main-travelled road south of the river. There is a bridge a couple of miles or so below Gorham, where the power company has a building and a great dam, through which dam is cut a mighty sluice-way, roaring and dashing like another Niagara, the purpose of which is to let the logs pass through. There were no logs when we passed, but a great pour of foaming water.

And beyond, that wonderful hide-and-seek road on the north shore of the Androscoggin—a road which the motorists leave to its sylvan beauty, making it one of the most supremely fit ways for a walking trip in all New England. At first it leads through woods, where the great white canoe-birches stand in battalions at salute as you pass. Then the road overlooks charming broad meadows, with the mountains of the Presidential range crowning the westward view. Mounts Madison and Adams are the chief sentinels here. For sheer beauty, Mount Madison, in the Nomad's view, is unsurpassed in New Hampshire, except by Lafayette and Moosilauke. Carter Dome, too, and Mount Moriah loom over the landscape here. And to the northward, the giant forest wall of Shelburne and Mount Hayes, and the Bald Cap peaks.

Shelter on Front Porches

Charming farmhouses peep out here and there under the lee of the high hills, facing southerly on the meadows. Soon after we crossed the river at the power house, the threatening clouds broke into a heavy rain, and we took refuge on the porch of a house where an old man was smoking his pipe and reading a book. Another and a very old man was dozing away inside the door. Brothers these, who told us that their father, eighty years before, had planted the great maples in front of the door, and had gazed as they were gazing in satisfaction over the broad, rich meadows below. Were these aged brothers glad to see the wayfarers? Plainly they were.

They regaled us with stories of the big white-headed black bear that comes down the mountain. Of their promising flock of sheep this big bear had devoured all but nine. On one occasion he had killed a cow, and with one wrench of his mighty jaws had torn one of the cow's hind legs out of her body and made off with it for his breakfast. A terrible creature, this white-headed bear. The two old men, living here all their lives, were keenly conscious of the forest at their backs. "It runs back thirty miles," said one; "nothing there but woods."

There is no end to the goodness of these people along the road. Manifestly there are not enough hikers to wear out their benevolence. It was a rainy day, and once more we rushed to a farmhouse porch. It provided the fairest meadow and mountain view on the whole Androscoggin—a view which Mr. Shorey, at Gorham, has embalmed in one of his lovely photographs. Could we eat our lunch on this porch? For answer, the kindly farmer brought a little table, and spread it with a white cloth. "Now we'll make you some tea," he said; "we're just two men here—no women-folks—and so we can do as we please." The tea was excellent.

What about the implication that women-folks might not permit their men to be so hospitable to wayfaring strangers? There is something in it. The basis of inhospitality, where it is found, is fear. A couple of male farmers, "batching it," have no fear and can be as friendly as they like.

Below Shelburne, at Philbrook's there is a fine old farmhouse, which is kept as an inn of the real old-fashioned sort. In view of the weather, we felt warranted in spending the night here, though the full day's stunt had scarcely been fullfilled. But that is really the charm of a walking-trip—not to be out for a record; to care little whether the stunt is done, or whether twenty or eight miles are walked; to stop where it is pleasant, to loiter in shady and flowery ways; to pluck a rose in an old burying ground and read the pious inscriptions; to cross the bridge at Gilead and run up Wild River a little way, sitting on a rock and watching the gliding trout in the pool.

Cross the Line Into Maine

We proved the fun of it all at the point where the north-shore road runs plump into Hark Hill, on the line between New Hampshire and Maine. The highway bends around the southern or meadow side of the hill, but there is a wood-road which runs to the northward, plainly with an intention to circle the hill on the other side.

Of course we took the woodroad at a venture. It turned out to be a venture. First, some half-mile in, there was a fence straight across the wood-road, with the sign: "No Trespassing." But the sign was old; it looked obsolete. We chanced it safely for another half-mile; when suddenly we stood on the bank of little Ingalls River—and no bridge across it. The companion proposed to go back; but when she was threatened with being carried across, she took off her shoes and stockings, like a man, and the little river was forded safely. How refreshing the cool stream to hot feet!

Everywhere along the road, and for days to come, noble trees and beautiful flowers. Here and there the odorous beds of the twin flower, the Linnaea borealis, most exquisite flower of the north, for which the Nomad reserves a special panegyric in a future articles. The fields are red with the hawk-weed, or devil's paint-brush, which is softened by sheets of white daisies, or red clover or buttercups. In all the meadows and along the streams, such quantities of blue irises in full bloom! Every little while a rapturous harmony of flowery color; and there are wild strawberries upon which to regale oneself.

The cinnamon roses adorn in profusion the surroundings of the farmhouses, many of which are deserted, ruined, sometimes with buildings all faded away, but the roses blooming gaily on. Really, is not the cinnamon rose rioting all about the empty cellar hole where the homestead once stood, the true symbol of New England.

A Long Pull to Bethel

Under the shadow of Tumbledown Dick and Ellingwood Mountain, it is a long pull to Bethel, but there are cheering panoramas all the way, and Mount Moriah, Carter Dome and Caribou loom grandly to the south and the southwestward. And Bethel is one of the most restorative places in the world for tired feet.

There is something soothingly sweet even in the word "Bethel"—the prettiest town-name in Maine at least—and the town is loyally trying to live up to its name. But here, for a while, we take leave of the rambling, meadowy, islanded Androscoggin. The river shoots off to the northward in an absolutely square turn, as if it were going to the pole. And to the southward the long rise of Paradise hill beckons. The story of what happened thitherward had better be continued in our next.

New England Milk Production Starts Seasonable Decline

Reports from many dairymen in all parts of New England indicate that the average milk producton per cow for all cows has declined 2.4 per cent. in June according to a report released by the New England Crop Reporting Service. This compares with a decrease of .8 per cent. in 1926, a gain of 1.3 per cent. in 1925, and a decrease of 5.7 per cent. in 1924. Pastures, better than average have helped to maintain milk production at a high level. Pasture conditions, a year ago, were quite poor especially in Southern New England. Feeding of grain continues quite liberal altho grain prices have risen considerably in recent months. Milk prices have been seasonably favorable.

The average milk production per cow on July 1, was only .3 per cent. higher than a year ago for New England as a whole. Increases over last year of 4.8 per cent. in Maine; 27.1 in Rhode Island; and 2.8 per cent. in Connecticut were almost wholly offset by decreases from last year of 7 per cent. in New Hampshire; 2 per cent. in Vermont and 4.7 per cent in Massachusetts. On July 1 the average daily milk production for New England as a whole was 18.99 pounds per cow compared with 18.94 pounds a year ago and 18.43 pounds two years ago. Dry cows on July 1 were 14.84 per cent of all cows for New England compared with 13.78 per cent. in 1926 and 14.01 per cent in 1925. Percentages of cows dry range from 9.43 per cent. of all cows in Vermont to 21.93 per cent. in New Hampshire.

Declines in numbers of milk cows from a year ago fully offset the higher average production per cow. On July 1, dairymen's reports for their own farms indicated the following changes in numbers of milk cows from a year ago; Maine declined 6.3 per cent; New Hampshire 4.1 per cent.; Vermont 1.0 percent.; Massachusetts 2.1 per cent. and Connecticut 4.0 per cent. A gain of 1.0 per cent. is indicated in Rhode Island. For New England the change was an average decline of 2.9 per cent.

The net price of all milk for June as reported in the current monthly letter of the New England Milk Producers' Association was $3.14 per hundred compared with $2.05 per hundred in June a year ago and $1.98 the five year average 1922-1926. This is the highest price for June milk since 1920.

Dramatic Activities at Camp Wigwam, Harrison

Dramatics are not of major interest at Camp Wigwam, Harrison, but hold an important part of the life in the summer camp.

The chief aim in staging programs in the open-air theatre is to give enjoyment, to develop in the boys a love of the beauty of the theatre and the best drama, and ultimately to furnish a new form of self-expression.

Activities commenced early in July and are reaching the peak with August 1 designated as Campers' Day, with several neighboring summer groups joining in a Song Contest for a silver trophy. The Wigwam Players will present one act of "Make-Believe".

On August 7, the Players will present "The Vanishing Princess" by John Golden. On August 14, they will give "Dancing Dolls" by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman. Two plays is the offering of Aug. 21, namely "The Discovery" and "The Little Father of the Wilderness." The last stage performance is scheduled for Aug. 28, a few days before the homeward journey.

There is a strong personnel in charge, as follows: Valentine P. Newmark, Director of the Wigwam Players; E. Valentine Bjorkman, Assistant Director; Frank Swift, Art Director; Herbert L. Newman, Director of Music; Morris Mandelbaum, Student Stage Manager; John Eisman, Student Electrician.

Swivel Chair Farm Notes

Local production of timber encourages local wood-using industries.

Under any plan of feeding hogs, free access to good, pure, water and a mineral substance containing salt is necessary at all times.

Certain kinds of trees, like the locust and acacias, build up poor soil through the nitrogen-gathering bacteria in the root nodules.

A good quality of alfalfa or clover is the best kind for growing calves. Calves should be taught to eat a little hay at an early age.

In building a poultry house it is safe to allow about four square feet of floor space per bird. The lighter birds, such as Leghorns and Anconas, usually require less floor space than Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Wyandottes.

Flavors and odors in milk result mainly from four causes: (1) The internal or physical condition of the individual cow, (2) highly flavored feeds, (3) odors absorbed by the milk after production, (4) biological changes in the milk. Feed flavors may be avoided by feeding highly flavored foods immediately after and not just before milking. Pastures should be cleared of weeds which cause objectionable flavors and odors in milk. Until this is done it is advisable to remove cows from infested pastures as long as possible before milking.

The presence of flies is an indication of uncleanliness, insanitary conditions and improper disposal of substances in which they breed. Flies are not only annoying but are actually dangerous to health, since they may carry disease germs to exposed foods. Means of excluding the house of flies include the use of screens, fly papers, poisons, and fly traps. Information on this subject including explanation of methods of eliminating breeding places may be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The common cabbage worm, also known and one of the most important insect enemies of cabbage, is a velvet green worm, or caterpillar, in stature when full grown, about 1 1-4 inches in length, and is the young of a well known white butterfly. It feeds upon the leaves and eats into the buds and head of the cabbage, starting early in the season and continuing active until frost. Natural enemies do much to hold the pest in check. The best method of control is by spraying or dusting with arsenical poisons such as lead arsenate, calcium arsenate or Paris green. The treatment should begin as soon as the worms are noticed and continue as often as necessary to protect the crop properly. These poisons are not recommended for use on edible where the outer leaves are to be used for human food as "greens," or are to be fed to livestock

Dairy cows should have all the salt they want. The quantity consumed will vary with the kind of feed and size of the animal. Experiments have shown that ordinary cows in milk still require about 1 ounce of salt a day. Heavy producers should get more. Many dairymen mix salt with the grain mixture, in proportions of 1 to 2 pounds of salt with each 100 pounds of concentrates. In addition salt is provided so that the cows can have access to it and take more if they desire. Stock salt can be purchased in several forms. In cake form, salt may be kept in each feed box in the barn where each animal can lick it, or it may be placed in convenient places in the lot or pasture. It should be in some sheltered place to prevent the rain from dissolving it.

Good corn bread can be made with either sweet or sour milk.

Whipped cream is not only a pleasing luxurious addition to a dessert, but a food in itself. It is not needed after a rather hearty dinner, but is appetizing and suitable after the lighter types of meal served in summer time.

In a good many parts of the country cotton fabrics can be worn to advantage until late in the fall. Colors grow duller as the season advances, and materials somewhat heavier, but as cotton garments can be laundered easily and are inexpensive, they remain popular.

Is your kitchen sink the right height? If you find yourself stooping over it, and cannot change its position, put a block of wood under the dishpan. Blocks of wood under the legs of the kitchen table, too, will eliminate some of the backache that comes from working at too low a surface.

If you are planning to build or remodel a kitchen, be sure to arrange for a two-way closet in the connecting wall between the dining room and kitchen. This will save you many steps. Since dishes can be put in when washed on the kitchen side and taken out on the dining room side, while the process is reversed in putting the table, after a meal.

If you put away left-over cooked cereals in pound baking powder tins or other receptacles which will mold them in good shape for slicing and frying, they will be ready to use as a dinner vegetable in place of potato or rice. Dip each slice in flour, have the fat hot, and brown the pieces on one side until delicately browned before turning over.

There are a number of suitable garnishes and flavorings for iced tea. A sprig of mint adds a cool summery touch. Candied lemon or orange peel, and candied pineapple are nice. Slices of lemon, orange or lime are good. Some people like whole cloves, a stick of cinnamon, crystallized ginger or rose geranium leaves with iced tea.

Inch of Rain is 100 Tons to Acre. Several hundred pounds of water are necessary during the life of a cultivated plant to produce 1 pound of marketable matter. Thus a plant such as wheat or corn requires each day an amount of water several times its own weight. It often occurs that nature supplies not the amount required for best development throughout the growing season. A much greater quantity of water is supplied to the crop in a moderately heavy rain than is usually supposed. With a rainfall of 1 inch without loss by run-off, more than 100 tons of water is supplied to 1 acre of land.

Mildewed Leather—The simplest way to prevent leather articles from mildewing is to keep them in a well ventilated, well-lighted place, preferably one where they get to the sunlight. When mildew does appear it should be washed off with soapsuds and warm water, or simply wiped off with a moist cloth, drying the leather well afterwards. These measures are more effective in the factory than the application in the home of preparations designed to prevent the growth of mildew.

Good Beef Cow—A good beef cow is smooth, well proportioned, with short legs, shrt back, short and broad head, wide muzzle, glossy hair, and a loose pliable skin. She should have a large udder and give enough milk to feed her calf well. Beef cows are usually quiet, blockier, more symmetrical, carry more flesh, and have smaller udders than dual-purpose cows. Do not keep breeders or cattle with contagious abortion, lumpy jaw, or tuberculosis.

WHEN DUTY CALLS

The day of June 25, 1876, was bright and cheerful. The sun rose high into the heavens and the sky was clear and blue.

A dust cloud drifted into the air and when it cleared, a troop of cavalry came in sight. At their head sat a man on a roan horse. He was broad and sunburnt with long golden hair. He wore a buckskin suit.

The Seventh Cavalry was a fine body of men that ever rode to battle.

Their commander was Gen. George A. Custer, who had fought in the Civil War and was brave and daring.

On that beautiful day the Seventh Cavalry was going to settle the trouble, Sitting Bull had stirred up. The company was to make a detour to attack the camp from the rear. In doing so they were riding to their death. It was a jolly company that rode along that route, on that fatal day. They were laughing and joking.

The company was attacked in a valley between a river and a bluff by a force of Indians which outnumbered the famous Fighting Seventh Cavalry five to one. The battle raged for twenty minutes. Custer and his men were caught between a river and a bluff. The bluff at their back and the river in front of them. Men dropped like grass before the scythe. A small company of men were caught up on the bluff and could not get down to help Custer and his men. Custer looked like the God of War standing amidst his kneeling and fallen comrades. In twenty minutes all of the men of the Fighting Seventh were killed or wounded but Custer and the few who held the flag. Custer had gone too far away from the main army under Terry's command. The next volley that was discharged by the Indians swept Custer and his followers down. In twenty minutes 270 men of the Fighting Seventh Cavalry was killed. Each man had answered his country's call. Each man had done his duty. Every man had died a soldier's death. They helped to make the flaming chapter in history "The Winning of the West."—Earl S. Pierce.

Planets in Haying Time

Venus has begun the passage between the earth and the sun. She is shining upon us with only half her light; even so she will grow brighter until August 5. If we could see Venus from Mercury when the two are in line with tthe sun and on the same side, her brightness would almost equal that of the moon. You will understand that Venus, seen through a large telescope, looks like a half-moon. But her surface is mostly hidden by thick clouds and very little idea of its character can be made out. Our earth must present similar difficulties to the observers on Mars. On the average, about one-fourth of the earth's surface is all the time covered with clouds, and the identification of spots on its surface would tax the ingenuity of the Martian astronomers.

Mars is now about 30 degrees from the setting sun, and will be difficult to see for the next six months without artificial help. Venus will pass him, August 22, the second time this summer.

As Venus grows less conspicuous Jupiter will come again to dominate the evening sky, rising at present about 10 P. M. Clear skies are now exceptional but I had the pleasure of seeing the planet being a few nights ago. I tried to find Uranus which according to the almanac is close by. I found a sixth magnitude star about one degree from Jupiter which I suspect is the one sought. Both Jupiter and Uranus are near their stationary point and moving but slightly. On July 9 they were in conjunction and will be again, August 19. Watchfulness and good luck should give me a chance to make the acquaintance of the planet which Mr. Hershel introduced to the world.

Mercury will be farthest west of the sun, August 8. Near his greatest distance south of the ecliptic, it will require keen search to find him in the mornings of the lessening days. That he will be near perihelion will add to the difficulty of observation.

Watching Saturn should be altogether satisfactory. His western motion among the stars of Scorpio will come to an end, August 6. Nineteen days later, he will be in quadrature. After this he must recover the seven degrees (about) which he lost by retrogression and gain a good share of the angular distance which makes up his annual progress, before the sun overtakes him in December.—News and Critic.

Hallgramites

Taken From Mrs. Hall's Items in the News and Critic

We won't say anything more about Hot Weather, for we have had a great plenty of it for the past week or ten days. Yes, and enough hail, thunder, and lightning also. I never saw such a continuous storm before. I never saw a thunder storm before that didn't have a tendency to cool off the air a little. What we've had lately has left the heat almost unbearable. I hope we get a change soon, but no frost.

If those people who refuse to work on a farm had to go hungry until they did help to till the land, they might decide to accept a position on a farm.

With so many out of work in this city, one would expect help to be plenty, but the most of those talking work, let their tongues do the work and their hands rest. Some men will be content to remain idle while their wives work and they can get grub to satisfy their needs.

Sunday morning Mrs. Hall thought she would take a look at her potato patch and see if Mr. Bug was at work. She took a pail along with her. She found bugs plenty, all sizes. She went over about half her piece and gave it up as a bad job. She had about a quart of bugs in her pail. She took them to the house and gave them a bath in kerosene and then gave them Hell fire without the brimstone. Many, at least, eat no more.

Electrification of Poultry Farm

The electrification of the poultry farm of Charles C. Clement and Son of West Winterport, the first of a series of Maine farms to be remodelled into modern electrically equipped farms for demonstration purposes, is nearly completed and it is planned to open it to the public on August 4th in connection with the Waldo County Farm Bureau Inspection Tour.

This work of farm electrification is being done in conjunction with the College of Agriculture, U. of M., and the Rural Service department of the Central Maine Power Company. It is proposed to show the various ways in which electric current can be used in carrying on the work of the farm and the farm household. The College is to keep accurate records of this work, which, it is believed, will furnish valuable information to farmers as to the manner in which electricity can profitably be used on the farm.

According to a statement from a member of the joint committee appointed by the College and the power company, it is planned later to select and electrify other farms in different sections of the State. This will afford Maine farmers an opportunity to keep up with what progressive farmers in other states are doing in connection with the present day trend toward complete electrification of the farm.

The Clement farm is a private farm but has been selected for this demonstration due to its location and facilities for ready adaptability for experimental work of this nature.

This farm is well known as one of the large poultry raising farms of the State. During the season 1927, over 25,000 chicks were raised. Ordinarily 2,000 laying hens are kept during the season. At the present time two standard types of incubators, one heated by coal and one by fuel oil with electrically operated circulating fans are in use but these will be augmented by a 12,000 egg capacity incubator of the most modern type heated by electricity. Electrically driven fans will keep the air in circulation at all times. All of the poultry houses are electrically lighted according to the latest improved methods.

In addition to this equipment there will be a five horsepower portable motor for general use including sawing wood, elevating, grinding and mixing feed. Incidentally 100 tons of feed are used annually to maintain the Clement farm. Electric water heaters of the immersion type are being installed for use during cold weather.

An important feature of the Clement poultry farm is its freedom from white diarrhea or bone diseases. To maintain this condition, according to the latest scientific discoveries, there will be installed ultra violet rays equipment for treatment of bone diseases. Water for the entire farm will be pumped by automatically operated electric pumps.

In its search for freedom from farm drudgery and at the same time with an eye toward increased profits for the farm, the committee in charge of this work has also extended its research work to the farm home. Here in the Clement homestead will be found practically every electrical home appliance from the popular electric iron to the more recently perfected means of electrical refrigeration. All cooking, sweeping, ironing, heating of water, and in fact every modern convenience that the city home now enjoys will be carried to the farm.

The Waldo County farm bureau will make the Clement farm one of its principal points of interest when it begins its inspection tour of Waldo County farms in August and will hold an important session of its meeting on August 4 at this farm.

Some idea of the progress Maine is making toward electrification of its farms is obtained from a recent statement made by the Central Maine Power Company that during 1926 alone this company built 105 miles of rural lines which served approximately 800 rural homes. It has lately established a department of rural electrification with a special agent in charge of rural work. This company has been cited as having a larger percentage of rural customers than any operating company east of the Mississippi which reflects a progressive spirit of co-operation among the agricultural and power interests of this State.

Letters from Satisfied
DURO PUMP USERS
in this locality
(Names On Request)

I consider the Duro Pump all that it is represented to be. I have used it three years, and I don't feel that I could get along without it. It does twice the amount of work that I intended it should do when purchased.

In reply to your request will say that I have used the Duro Pump at my residence two years and it has given perfect satisfaction.

The Duro is a wonderful Pump. I consider it one of the greatest conveniences I ever bought for my home.

Mr. Butts takes excellent care of the Pump. It is of great use to me and has been for two years. I always recommend it to others.

Can you recommend any Artesian Well Diggers? I may need one dug next summer as our supply here is poor.

My Duro Pump was set up May 14, 1925. I like it very much and haven't had a bit of trouble with it, it works fine.

In answer to the above my Pump has only been in two weeks. It works fine so far. You have a good agent in Mr. Butts.

Replying to your letter of the 21st inst., Mr. Ralph R. Butts of South Paris installed a Duro Pump for my water supply in the Spring of this year. I have been using the same to my satisfaction for about six months. Mr. Butts did his work in a competent manner, and I know of no reason why I should not continue to be pleased with the pump's performance.

I have had my Pump two months and it is giving perfect satisfaction.

I have had twenty months service from my Pump without one minute's trouble.

The Duro Pump has fulfilled all your claims for it, and surpassed many of my expectations. It has been operating perfectly for me for more than a year, forcing water through 320 feet of pipe to an elevation of 40 feet and has not cost us a cent for repairs. It is durable and dependable. Be assured we are perfectly satisfied.

I have had the Duro Pump about 3 months and it is very satisfactory.

I have had my Pump two years. I use it for the summer months only and find efficient, and Mr. Butts given me excellent service on it.

Don't Get Along Any Longer Without Water
